Case No. 08 CV 0313 H (CAB)

DEFENDANT MITEC TELECOM, INC.'S REPLY MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS
SECOND AMENDED COMPLAINT

Date: August 11, 2008

Time: 10:30 a.m.

Place: Courtroom 13

Complaint Filed: January 18, 2008

Trial Date: None Set

I. INTRODUCTION

In its opposing papers, Plaintiff repeats a number of times the general principle that motions to dismiss are disfavored, and seems to argue, largely on that basis, that this Motion should be denied. The simple fact remains, however, that while motions to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) may not be encouraged generally, they are very appropriate, and should be granted, where “it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of its claim which would entitle it to relief.” Rutman Wine Co. v. E & J Gallo Winery, 829 F.2d 729, 732 (9th Cir. 1987). As detailed below and in Mitec’s moving papers, Plaintiff’s Second Amended Complaint does not pass muster under this standard, and this Motion should be granted.

Specifically, in at least four of its five causes of action, Plaintiff bases its claims on purported written agreements without attaching those agreements as exhibits or quoting them in full or setting forth their full content. Plaintiff contends that these allegations are sufficient, but they plainly are not; Plaintiff sets forth only very general allegations as to what Mitec or other parties may have agreed to, without specifying in any detail the substance of the full agreements or what their full import was intended to be. For this reason, Plaintiff’s First Cause of Action, for misappropriation of trade secrets, Third Cause of Action, for intentional interference with prospective economic relations, Fourth Cause of Action, for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and Fifth Cause of Action, for breach of contract, all fail.

Additionally, the First Cause of Action simply does not properly allege the existence of a trade secret; the alleged efforts Plaintiff made to develop its customer list and then maintain its confidentiality do not rise to the level necessary to demonstrate why or how that information should be protected as a trade secret. Finally, in its Second Cause of Action, for fraud and deceit, Plaintiff sets forth a lengthy list of supposed false representations made by Mitec’s representatives that, in their totality, are

1 nothing more than statements about the future and the hoped-for result that the products
 2 delivered to Plaintiff would be free of defects. Contrary to Plaintiff's contention in its
 3 opposing papers, this argument is not "irrational," but a plain and true summary of what
 4 Plaintiff alleges Mitec's representatives said. What would be truly "irrational" would
 5 be to permit Plaintiff to turn a defective products claim into a fraud action.

6
 7 For these reasons, Mitec's Motion should be granted, and Plaintiff's Second
 8 Amended Complaint should be dismissed.

9 10 II. ARGUMENT

11 A. Plaintiff's First Cause Of Action For Misappropriation Of Trade 12 Secrets, And Third Cause Of Action, For Interference With 13 Prospective Economic Advantage, Fail To State Valid Causes Of 14 Action.

15 Again, to state a cause of action for misappropriation of trade secrets under the 16 Uniform Trade Secrets Act ("UTSA"), plaintiff must plead two primary elements: (1)
 17 the existence of a trade secret, and (2) misappropriation of the trade secret. See Cal.
 18 Civ. Code § 3426.1(b). Plaintiff insists that it has alleged these elements in its Second
 19 Amended Complaint, but it very clearly has not.

20
 21 As noted in Mitec's moving papers, Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint
 22 attempts to cure the plain deficiencies of its previous pleading by alleging two written
 23 agreements, including one purported non-disclosure agreement with Mitec, and 24 asserting that it entered into confidentiality agreements with its employees and others.
 25 Unfortunately for Plaintiff, these additional allegations are not good enough. First, the 26 purported written agreements are not attached as exhibits, and are described only in the 27 most bare-bones fashion. Plaintiff insists that "bare-bones" allegations are sufficient
 28 (Opposing papers, at p. 4), but Mitec is still entitled, at a minimum, to have the making

1 of the agreement and the substance of its relevant terms alleged (see Perry v. Robertson,
2 201 Cal.App.3d 333, 341 (1988)), and Plaintiff does not do that here.

3
4 Specifically, the description of the purported non-disclosure agreement of June 2,
5 2005 only sets forth very general allegations as to what Mitec may have agreed to,
6 without specifying in any detail the substance of the full agreement or what its full
7 import was intended to be. And the mere allegation that Plaintiff entered into 8 confidentiality agreements with its employees and others simply is not enough, without
9 more, to demonstrate that Plaintiff's "customer list" was a trade secret. There is no
10 description of what those purported agreements consisted of, or of what the parties
11 actually agreed to. Under these circumstances, Plaintiff yet again fails to describe how,
12 if at all, it ensured that its employees or anyone else would not disclose or provide the 13 customer list to others.

14
15 In its opposing papers, Plaintiff insists, at some length, that the allegations of the 16 purported contracts are sufficient (Opposing papers, at pp. 4-5), but upon close
17 inspection they simply do not stand up. Again, none of the allegations concerning any 18 of the purported written agreements consist of any substance of what Mitec or any other
19 party purportedly agreed to do or not do, basic elements that Mitec is entitled to know
20 and that an actionable claim must state. Because Plaintiff has failed yet again to allege
21 the existence of a trade secret, any misappropriation is not actionable, and Plaintiff's
22 first cause of action should be dismissed.

23
24 For the same reasons, Plaintiff's Third Cause of Action, for interference with 25 prospective economic relations, also should be dismissed. The entire factual basis for 26 the claim rests on the purported nondisclosure agreement described in the cause of 27 action for misappropriation of trade secrets, and that because that cause of action fails,
28 Plaintiff's interference cause of action fails as well.

B. Plaintiff's Second Cause Of Action For Fraud And Deceit Fails To State A Valid Cause Of Action.

In its opposing papers, Plaintiff insists that the allegations concerning fraud are sufficient. In sum, it claims that the substance of the purported nondisclosure agreement is adequately alleged, and that the statements allegedly made by Mitec representatives concerning the product to be shipped to Plaintiff were representations of fact, not opinions. (Opposing papers, at pp. 6-7.) On the contrary, the allegations do not satisfy basic pleading requirements.

First, Plaintiff's fraud claim is based on representations allegedly made by Mitec in the purported June 2, 2005 written non-disclosure agreement, and as detailed above and in Mitec's moving papers, that alleged agreement is not a sufficient basis for any claim, including this fraud claim. Plaintiff contends that it has pled the facts of the purported agreement with sufficient particularity, but what the substance of the agreement, and what Mitec allegedly agreed to do or not to do, is not set forth in sufficient context for Mitec to know what facts it must defend against.

And as for the alleged representations concerning the quality of the product, they were nothing more than the opinion of the Mitec personnel concerning the product and concerning what would happen in the future, i.e., that any defects had been and would be remedied. Plaintiff insists that Mitec's characterization of these statements is "irrational," and claims that they could be nothing other than representations of fact. (Opposing papers, at p. 7.) This argument deliberately misperceives the substance of the alleged statements. Mitec's representatives simply stated their opinion about the product, and their opinion as to what would happen in the future. Again, Plaintiff is trying to turn a defective products claim into a fraud action. That result would be truly "irrational," and this Court should dismiss this cause of action.

C. Plaintiff's Fourth Cause Of Action, For Breach Of Covenant Of Good Faith And Fair Dealing. And Its Fifth Cause Of Action, For Breach Of Contract, Fail To State Valid Causes Of Action.

In its opposing papers, Plaintiff contends that the two purported written agreements, the alleged June 2, 2005 non-disclosure agreement, and the purported July 26, 2006 "bill and hold" agreement, are described with sufficient specificity for Plaintiff's Fourth Cause of Action, for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and its Fifth Cause of Action, for breach of contract, to survive. (Opposing papers, at pp. 7-8.) One wonders what complaint Plaintiff has been reading.

Specifically, and again, the description of the purported non-disclosure agreement of June 2, 2005 only sets forth very general allegations as to what Mitec may have agreed to, without specifying in any detail the substance of the full agreement or what its full import was intended to be. The same defects are present in the description of the "bill and hold" agreement; again, the description only sets forth in a general way the particulars of what Mitec agreed to do with respect to delivering product to Plaintiff and with respect to the quality of the product delivered.

Plaintiff protests that any effort to "specify in detail the full substance of the full agreement" would be "clearly impractical as it would be too time consuming to describe in detail the entire agreement and would mean that plaintiff would necessarily have to attach a copy of such agreement in each and every instance." (Opposing papers, at pp. 7-8.) This remarkable statement ignores both the common practice of attaching to pleadings and incorporating by reference written agreements and the purpose for which that practice has become common: to avoid the very difficulty we have encountered with Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint, where written agreements are described in inadequate detail and the parties being sued on those agreements consequently do not

1 know the substance of the claims against them. Both of these causes of action fail for
 2 this reason, and should be dismissed.

3 4 III. CONCLUSION

5 Throughout its opposing papers, Plaintiff insists that motions to dismiss under
 6 Rule 12(b)(6) are disfavored and that in almost all cases they should be denied. Mitec
 7 does not dispute that, in most cases, the pleading stage should be of limited duration and
 8 the parties should move on to litigate the action. But in cases like this, where the 9 pleading is plainly inadequate, and where Plaintiff has had multiple opportunities to get
 10 it right but has not, a motion to dismiss serves a critically useful office. Indeed, in one
 11 of the cases Plaintiff cites, Allarcom Pay Television, Ltd. v. General Instrument Corp.
 12 69 F.3d 381 (9th Cir. 1995), the Ninth Circuit noted that in reviewing a dismissal for 13 failure to state a claim it limits its review "to the contents of the complaint and 14 assume[s] that all the allegations of material fact are true" (69 F.3d at 385), but the 15 Court then proceeded to affirm the dismissal of Federal Communications Act claims
 16 against two defendants. (69 F.3d at 385-386.) The Court thus recognized that in 17 appropriate cases, such motions should be granted. That plainly is the case here.
 18 Accordingly, for the reasons set forth above and in Mitec's moving papers, Mitec
 19 respectfully requests that the Court grant its motion to dismiss Plaintiff's Second 20 Amended Complaint.
